COUNCIL GIVES ATTENTION TO REPORTS OF OFFICIALS

Burgess Risbeck Makes Statement of Arrests

WILL PREPARE ORDINANCE

Committee Instructed to Get Them in Shaps--Other Important Business

Reports and bills occupied much of the council's time Monday night at the regular monthly meeting. One of the most important reports was that of Burgess George W. Risbeck. It showed that during the month of April there had been 55 arrests Fines and costs amounting to $84.35 were assessed and $73.35 was paid the remainder being served by prisoners. President J. K. Hein was in the chair and councilmen present were: C. O. Frye, Oscar C. Linn, Dr. A. ODavis, andW. R. Gaut. Charles Schmeiler and W. H. Calvert were absent.

The ordinance committee was instructed to prepare the ordinance which are in their hands This will include several, among which will be a dog ordinance, a tree ordinance and a building ordinance.

Chairman Linn of the street committee reported that some of the streets had been visited by members of council, relative to establishing grades. The visits will be finished at a later date.

The police committee was instructed to assist in getting a record of all the electric light, electric railway and telephone poles in the town so that a correct record may be kept of them. Along the same line action was taken to the effect that Borough Engineers at the expiration of their term of office turn over to the borough all record books and data held by them of borough work done.

A monument to mark the boundary of the borough at the northern end of McKean avenue, which had been removed, is to be replaced.

The report of the treasurer, E. W. Hastings showed a deficit for the month of March. Disbursements amounted to $3,064.95, and the receipts for the month were $1,123.39. There was reported an overdraft of $1,941.56.

OPENING GAME IS STOPPED BY RAIN

Jupiter Pluvius put a crimp in the plans for the opening baseball game to have been played Monday evening by the champion Episcopals and Christians. A down pour of rain prevented the game being called and the opener was postponed until tonight when the Baptists and the Washington Avenue Presbyterians are scheduled to fight it out. It is not thought the cold weather will prevent the game from being played.

Lightning Puts Out the Lights

Charleroi Streets Dark Last Night on Account of Heavy Storm

The storm Monday afternoon put the street lighting service out of commision effectively for a time Monday night. During the storm lightning entered the power house of the West Penn Electric company and disabled some of the machines. The company was able to light the stores but not the streets until about 10 o'clock at night.

CONSTABLES MAKE RETURNS OF CLUBS AT MONONGAHELA

Booze Question is Put Up to the District Attorney and the Grand Jury by Valley Officers

In the report of the constables at the county seat at Washington Monday, which some newspapers facetiously call the "quarterly blind men's parade," it is stated that a constable from Monongahela returned three of the leading clubs of that city as being virtually speakeasies. Two of the clubs are the Elks and the Eagles and they are both strong in numbers and influence, some of the most prominent residents of the town being members. The third club, it is believed is of about the same character and class.

The reports of the constables were made a good deal of a mystery because of the desire of the district attorney to pass them up to the grand jury, which began its session. If the grand jury can be shown that organizations which pay government tax and conduct buffets are violating the law it is expected that a bundle of true bills will be returned and that a bitter and sensational legal battle will result.

Minstrel is Well Given

Benefit Affair For St. Jerome's Church is Good Success

The Colonial Minstrels played to a good crowd at Coyle Theatre Monday night in a benefit for St. Jerome's Catholic church. Given under the direction of John Jenkins, the minstrel was undoubtedly one of the best efforts of the kind attempted in Charleroi for some time.

The end men were at their best. With Miller, Nick Phillips, Heffran, and Barrett as the bones and Brady, Michiner, Rider and Ray as the tamboes there was a comical lineup that would be hard to beat. Their songs were sung in a style that would have made professional minstrel kings turn green with envy. Jack Rickey was the interlocutor, and he assisted the end men in getting off their jokes to perfection. The soloists wre Urban, Ed. Miller, Doss James and Lew Glasser.

In the olio were included good stunts by Urban, as a crack shooter, Jack Keefer, in a musical monologue and Miller, Ray , James and Brady in "Look Out for Jimmy Valentine." A cake walk concluded the performance. The performance will be repeated again tonight.

A feature was the versatility of Doss James. Ambrose, the wire walker and juggler, failed to put in an appearance and Mr. James stepped into the breach and without a moment's notice, supplied the deficiency with three excellent illustrated songs. These appealed to the audience more perhaps than the original number on the program.

After 8:30 tonight seats in the gallery will be sold at 25 cents.

Local Brigade Gets Uniform

Will Have Them Here for Decoration Day--May Form Battery

Measures were taken for 44 uniforms for the Charleroi Brigade Monday night by a representative of the firm of the M. G. Liley Co., of Pittsburg. He will finish the work of taking measurements tonight and the order be placed at once, so that the new equipment will be here by Decoration Day. An effort is being made by the brigade to form a battery. The battery would contain two 3-inch guns, and sabres and revolvers would form a part of the armament. Capt. R. Dale Jolliffe has communicated with the Secretary of War in regard to the battery and an answer is expected in a few days. The bridage will hold their annual election of officers Thursday.

KILLS SELF DURING FIT OF INSANITY

Monongahela Glassworker Fires Bullet Into Brain

FIRST SHOOTS AT WIFE

Temporarily insane it is said Thomas Cotter aged 45 of Monongahela after firing five shots at his wife Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock placed the revolver in his own mouth and fired the one remaining bullet into his brain He died almost instantly. Ill health superinducing melancholia and temporary insanity is ascribed as the cause. Mrs Cotter escaped injury.

Cotter was a well known glassworker. It is said that as Mrs Cotter was sitting in her home reading he addressed some incoherent remarks to her, which were not answered immediately, whereupon it is asserted the man deliberately pulled a gun and placing his hand on her shoulder fired. In spite of the proximity of the gun, the bullet went wild. She fled into the yard and screamed for help. He fired two more shots at her and then shot himself.

Four sons and five daughters survive. Cotter was the first man to break ground for the Wightman Window Glass company, at Monongahela which is now known as the American Window Glass company.

GRAND JURY BEGINS GRIND FOR MAY TERM

Joe T. S. Cowen, of Roscoe, is Named Foreman—Talk by Judge Taylor

The grand jury for the May term of court was called before Judge Taylor Monday and charged with their duties. The court called attention to the jurors that in addition to their ordinary duties they would be called upon to pass upon the improvement of several roads at the expense of the county and to increase the county indebtedness. In this he urged them to use judgment and discretion. Joe T. S. Cowan, editor of the Roscoe Ledger was made foreman of the grand jury.

Several true bills were found by the grand jury and several offenders pleaded guilty and were sentenced by the court All were petty cases.

NOT ASSURING.

With Congress tinkering with the tariff, with Supreme Court decisions pending that affect the operation of large industrial concerns and railroads, with a big strike of shopmen of the Pennsylvania Railroad company that threatens to involve the whole system, and numerous other unsettled labor conditions, the business outlook for the year is certainly not assuring. Capital under these conditions is not looking for investment, established industries are not expanding or extending their field of operation and building operations are halted and everything is in a waiting condition.

This is evidenced by the industrial reports of the week. First of all the United States Steel corporation which is the industrial business barometer of the country reduced its operating capacity from 75 to 65 per cent during the past week. Its earnings have been materially reduced, as well as those of other concerns, while railroad earnings have very materially fallen off. Building operations are less than usual the report from Philadelphia alone show $1,00,000 less for April than for the same month last year. The depression is now affecting the west, which was remarkably free from this disturbing influence last year, and a slow period in business generally is anticipated.

In the coal mining industry there is a slight impetus owing to the opening of the lake trade. This is only seasonal, and the public is made acquainted with previous slack conditions in mining by the resumption of mines that have long remained idle. Altogether the outlook is not assuring for a year of uninterrupted business operations.

OUR SCHOOLS.

How many school patrons have considered that the election of a new superintendent of schools takes place tonight? Perhaps there may be more than is apparent in the marts and public places; at all events let us hope so for it is a most momentous event in the social economy of the community. Superintendent J. G. Pentz, the present incumbent, is a candidate for re-election, and so far as known there is little opposition to him. He has proven a most efficient educator, and has maintained the progressive standard that has ever characterized the public schools of Charleroi.

The public may not be aware of the fact that the local High School is far ahead of many famous institutions of learning which fifty years ago were regarded with veneration and awe by the people generally and for which so many young men and women made innumerable sacrifices to attend. Here we have the same advantages right at our doors, and everything free—tuition, books, writing material and supplies—nothing to give in return for the best and most modern educatinal advantages but attendance study and effort. Perhaps one of the reasons why the graduating classes of the High School are so small, is that education is too easy to attain. Blessings that flow unrestrained are not so often appreciated as those that come through more difficult channels.

At all events, the youth of the present generation in Pennsylvania have educational opportunities which a century ago were thought impossible, and it is a matter of regret that they are not more fully appreciated.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

Although George Washington, first President of the United States, died 112 years ago, there's a man living at Washington, D. C., who bears the distinction of being the only living person who has looked upon the face of the Father of His Country. This is John Lane, 86 years old, and the occasion when he saw the features of the first President of the United States was when the tomb was opened at Mt. Vernon and the body transferred to a new location in 1837. An interesting account of the event is given in the current number of the Book of the Royal Blue issued by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and circulated in this community during the present week.

In accordance with the will of Washington, the family tomb of the Washington's was to be enlarged. This was not done until 1837, when the new tomb was built, and the body of the Father of His Country transferred to a new compartment. The transfer was made under supervision of a Congressional committee. Little Johnny Lane was a favorite with the statesmen who frequented his uncle's book store, and when the committee started to drive in a coach to Mt. Vernon to perform the momentous event Henry Clay picked Johnny up and lifted him to the driver's seat to accompany the party. The tomb of Washington was entered and an atempt was made to remove the coffin. It was found that the wood was so rotten that it fell to pieces, but inside was a leaden casket, containing the body, which had been hermetically sealed.

This was taken outside, when it is found that in the top of the casket was a piece of glass fitted directly over the face of the body, which had been embalmed in alcohol and tightly sealed in the casket. The glass was cleaned of the accumulations of the past years, when the features of the greatest of soldiers, patriots and statesmen were clearly visible. The alcohol had done its work, and the head and great trunk of the man remained as in life. The face was turned to one side and those who looked saw the profile. At one point on the cheek the flesh had come to the surface of the liquid, and here was a blemish in the otherwise well preserved face. One of the men present lifted Johnny Lane up and he gazed upon the features with the others. What impressed the boy most was the herculean figure of the great soldier and statesmen, and he remarked:

"He must have been a monstrous big man."

The casket was enclosed again and the body deposited in its present resting place Every other person who was present at the opening of the casket has long since died, and John Lane is the only person living who actually gazed upon the features of the immortal Washington The face, he says, appeared very much as it did in the pictures of Washington, and the incident was ever after impressed indelibly upon his memory.

HONORED THE MONKEY.

Origin of the Coat of Arms of the Earl of Leinster.

Most of the wild animals have a place in heraldry, and many strange and impossible creatures, such as griffins, dragons and unicorns, have been invented as emblems of daring and valor. But the donkey and the monkey have not been so used, except in one instance, where the monkey has been admitted to the ranks of titled nobility. The story of this adoption is told by Mr Curtis in his boo "One Irish Summer."

On the Leinster coat of arms are three monkeys standing with plain collar and chained; motto, "Crom a-boo," "To Victory." This is the only coat of arms, I am told, that has ever borne a monkey in the design It was adopted by John Fitzthomas Fitzgerald in 1316 for romantic reasons.

While this Earl of Leinster was an infant he was in the castle of Woodstock, which is now owned by the Duke of Marlborough. The castle caught fire. In the confusion the child was forgotten, and when the family and servants remembered him and started a search they found the nursery in ruins. But on one of the towers was a gigantic ape, a pet of the family, carefully holding the young earl in his arms. The animal, with extraordinary intelligence, had crawled through the smoke, rescued the baby and carried it to the top of the tower.

When the earl had grown to manhood he discarded the family coat of arms and adopted the monkeys for his crest, and they have been retained to this day. Wherever you find the tomb of a Fitzgerald you will see the monkeys at the feet of the effigy or under the inscription.

SPENDTHRIFT ISABELLA.

A Sight That Checked Her Royal Extravagance For Awhile.

We are accustomed to think that the day is long past when a sovereign could oppress and offend a whole kingdom by personal extravagance. But the late Isabella of Spain belonged in spirit to the sixteenth century. An incident of her reckless career—which ended in the loss of the throne—is noted in Munsey's Magazine.

She spent money, pouring it out like water, at a time when the treasury was nearly bankrupt and when the proverb "Poor as a Spaniard" was far too true. All her best advisers urged her to practice economy. Very few of them succeeded, and these only for a short time.

A certain chamberlain of hers once hit upon a plan to make her realize how enormous were the sums that she was spending. Passing through the hall of the palace, she was surprised to see a vast heap of silver pieces, resembling the contents of a great bin of wheat, but piled up in the middle of the floor. The queen summoned her chamberlain.

"What is the meaning of all this money?" she demanded of him.

"Oh," he replied, with a low bow, "this is merely the amount which I have brought out to pay the bill of your majesty's glovemaker."

The queen colored and then laughed, and for several months she was less extravagant in her expenditures for clothes.

E Pluribus Unum.

The country is indebted to John Adams for its national motto, with an Englishman of note sharing in the honor. It seems that while Adams was minister to England Sir John Prestwick, an eminent English antiquary, suggested to him a good motto to represent the union of the American colonies. Adams at once was taken with the idea, which he transmitted to Charles Thompson, the secretary of congress, who on June 20, 1782, reported to that body his design for a government seal. In this the Latin legend "E Pluribus Unum" was to be borne on a ribbon held in the beak of an eagle.

Just where Sir John got the idea is not certain, but it is a fact that the motto was in use on the cover of the Gentleman's Magazine, first published in 1730, and it may have struck his fancy by its applicability to the situation then obtaining in America.

New Zealand's Glaciers.

The great size of the glaciers around Mount Cook, in New Zealand, has been often remarked. The Tasman is eighteen miles long, the Murchison ten miles, the Godley eight miles, the Mueller eight miles and the Hooker seven miles. Most of these glaciers have moraines of exceeding roughness, but the approaches to them are not steep, as is usually the case with European glaciers. The southern Alpine snow line is only a little over 7,000 feet. Glacially polished rocks are rare, and in many ways the mountains are singularly different from those of central Europe.

"I was just telling our friend here, Molly, that it was storming on the day of our marriage."

"Surely not, Hiram! The weather was perfectly lovely!"

"Well, well! I don't know how I got so mixed up about it; probably because it's been storming ever since!"—Atlanta Constitution.

A Fish Story.

"There are as good fish in the sea as were ever taken out of it," remarked Small to Young, who had been refused by Moneybag's daughter.

"Yes, I know. But they are not goldfish."

Circumstances are the rulers of the weak. They are but the instruments of the wise.—Samuel Lover.

Schoolboy Blunders.

The University Correspondent recently offered a prize for schoolboy mistakes. Here are a few examples: "Mute, inglorious Milton"—these epitaphs are used by a writer who was envious of Milton's being poet orient. He finds "sermons in stones" expresses the same idea as Wordsworth's "the restless stone that all day long is heard." Calvin was a noted scientist and peer, who died lately. Naples is an independent state in the north of India. Shakespeare made a mistake in mentioning Galen, who did not live until a hundred years after his time. The feminine of fox is foxhen. John Burns was the name of one of the claimants to the throne of Scotland in the reign of Edward I. The pyramids are a range of mountains between France and Spain. The three highest mountains in Scotland are Ben Nevis, Ben Lomond and Ben Jonson. Wolsey saved his life by dying on the way from York to London. When the English first landed in Australia the only four footed animal in the country was a rat. Monsoons are fertile gorges between the Himalayas.

When Bjornson Died.

Bjornson's son, in describing the last hours of his father, writes: "Now and then the bright flame of his humor flickered up. The doctor felt his pulse and said it was good. With his face beaming with humor he turned toward us and said, 'I am the first man to die with a good pulse.' He said one evening—and it seemed as if an old wise man was speaking with the weight of experience, 'Now I could write—yes, now I could write, for I have been in the realms of death and have felt the pain that attends death.' And when all of us thought that the indifference of death was upon him—my mother, who always gave him his food, which he would receive only from her, stood at the bedside with a brooch on her breast which she had worn at her confirmation—then he opened his eyes and looked at her. He smiled, lifted his hand and touched the brooch. This was the last sign to the outer world he was able to give."

A Cold Ride.

All through his life Senator Dolliver of Iowa had a horror of fast trains and possible railroad wrecks. Once he was on a train with Vice President Fairbanks.

Dolliver awoke in the middle of the night, and it seemed to him that the train was going at terrific speed. He climbed out of his berth and, arrayed only in his pajamas, started down the length of the train to find the conductor and ask him to order the train run at less speed. It was a cold night, but the senator did not mind that until the door of his car snapped shut and locked behind him and he found that the door of the next coach was also locked. He rode sixty-five miles locked out in the cold of the vestibule before he could wake up anybody to let him in. Mr. Fairbanks finally heard his cries for help and rescued him.—New York Tribune.

Necks and Legs of Animals.

With few exceptions there is a marked equality between the length of the necks and of the legs of both birds and quadrupeds, and whether they be long or short is determined chiefly by the place where the animal must go for its food. This is especially noticeable in beasts that feed constantly upon grass, in which case the neck has just a slight advantage in that it cannot hang perpendicularly down. Crocodiles, lizards and fish have practically no necks. Fowls that feed in the water also offer an example of this correspondence between the members, with the exception of swans and geese and some Indian birds, which gather their food from the bottom of pools and must have long necks for that purpose, while the short legs make it more convenient for them to swim.—Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette.

A Story Pepys Tells.

Pepys tells in his diary that in the reign of King Charles II. a customer bargaining with a London merchant for claret hired a confederate to "thunder (which he had the art of doing upon a deal board) and to rain and hail—that is, make the noise of—so as to give them a pretense of undervaluing their merchant's wines, by saying this thunder would spoil and turn them, which was so reasonable to the merchant that he did abate two pistolls per tun for the wine in belief of that."

A Mighty Difference.

Brougham used to tell an anecdote about the flight from Waterloo. Napoleon was greatly depressed. His aid riding beside him thought he might be sorrowing over the loss of so many old comrades at arms and tried to comfort him by saying that Wellington also must have lost many friends. "He has not lost the battle," was the reply.

Utterly Useless.

"Pa, what is a futile remark?"

"The one a man makes for the purpose of changing the subject when his wife complains because he has forgotten their wedding anniversary."—Chicago Record-Herald.

She Was Wise.

"I asked Miss Jimps to sing something, and she refused point blank. Is she grouchy?"

"No. She's trying to make a hit with you. Cheer up."—Toledo Blade.

A Sound Reason.

Mistress—Didn't you hear me calling, Jane? Jane—Yes'm, but you told me the other day never to answer you back.—Throne and Country.

Whatever enlarges hope will exalt courage.—Johnson.

AFRAID OF MOONLIGHT.

The Reason Porto Ricans Carry Umbrellas at Night.

"The majority of Porto Ricans have instilled in them from earliest infancy a superstitious dread of the full moon's rays," said a business man who has just returned from that country.

"It is a curious sight to the American visitor to note men and women going along the streets and highways of the island with umbrellas raised over their heads in the lone watches of the night, and the more brilliantly the moon is shining the greater will be the number of people who are thus protecting themselves from her beams. Out in the sequestered rural districts a gay mounted cavalier will be met at midnight, his bridle rein in one hand and an upraised umbrella in the other. It looks weird and also ridiculous, but the natives do it for a peculiar reason. They are possessed of the conviction that Luna's full light striking upon mortals is almost sure to make them mentally unsound—that is to say, lunatics—and that is why they interpose a shield between them and her dazzling brightness.

"To sleep where the moon could shine full upon one is, in the view of a Porto Rican, to tempt fate, and it would be a daring one who could be hired to do it for any consideration."—Baltimore American.

STRENUOUS LIVING.

A Long Day In the Life of an English Lady In 1791.

As for industrious idleness, which is held to blame for the wrecking of our nervous systems, it was not unknown to an earlier generation. Mme. le Brun assures us that in her youth pleasure loving people would leave Brussels early in the morning, travel all day to Paris to hear the opera and travel all night home. "That," she observes—as well she may—"was considered being fond of the opera."

A paragraph in one of Horace Walpole's letters gives us the record of a day and a night in the life of an English lady—sixteen hours of "strain" which would put New York to the blush. "I heard the Duchess of Gordon's journal of last Monday," he writes to Miss Berry in the spring of 1791. "She first went to hear Handel's music in the abbey; she then clambered over the benches and went to Hastings's trial in the hall, after dinner to the play, then to Lady Lucan's assembly, after that to Ranelagh and returned to Mrs. Hobert's faro table; gave a ball herself in the evening of that morning, into which she must have got a good way, and set out for Scotland the next day. Hercules could not have accomplished a quarter of her labors in the same space of time."—Atlantic Monthly.

A Pretty Poor Portrait.

A Chinaman of very high rank had his portrait painted, and when it was finished the painter requested him to inquire of the passersby what they thought of it. The other agreed and asked the first comer:

"Do you think this portrait like?"

"The hat is extremely like," replied the critic.

The subject of the portrait asked a similar question of a second stranger, who answered that the clothes seemed to be exactly reproduced. He was about to interrogate a third when the painter stopped him and said impatiently:

"The resemblance of the hat and clothes is of no importance. Ask this gentleman what he thinks of the face."

On being asked this question the stranger hesitated a very long time, but at last he replied:

"The beard and hair are first rate."

London as It Was.

Haydn's "Dictionary of Dates" makes the statement that the old name of the city of London was written Lynden or Llyndin, meaning "the city on the lake." An old tradition gives us to understand that London was founded by Brute, a descendant of Aeneas, and called New Troy or Troynovant until the time of Lud, who surrounded the town with walls and named it Caer-Lud, or Lud's Town. This latter is probably the correct version of the story, if for no other reason because it is an easy matter to detect a similarity between the expression Lud's Town and London. It is claimed by some writers that there was a city on the same spot 1,107 years B. C., and it is known that the Romans founded a city there called Londinium A. D. 61.

Real Modesty.

"An actor should be modest, and most actors are," said a prominent one at a luncheon in Pittsburg. "But I know a young actor who at the beginning of his career carried modesty almost too far.

"This young man inserted in all the dramatic papers a want advertisement that said:

"'Engagement wanted—small part, such as dead body or outside shouts preferred.'"

Preferences.

"I think I'll spend my vacation on the lynx," said the first flea. "I'm fond of golf."

"The giraffe for mine," declared the second flea. "I need the highest altitude I can find."—Washington Herald.

Sensible.

Mrs. X.—The flat above us is unoccupied right now. Why don't you come and live there? Mrs. Y.—Oh, my dear, we've been such good friends, and I hate to start quarreling with you!—Exchange.

A Long Credit.

The motto of the highland host that battled for the Stuart cause, which bonny Prince Charlie headed, apparently was that heaven helps those who help themselves liberally. They levied toll on the henroost, stable and, according to the author of "The Land of Romance," even on the pockets of the Covenanters.

At Swarthholm a party of these marauders overhauled the house of a tailor, and when one of them was about to cut up a web of homespun that had taken his fancy the good wife earnestly remonstrated.

"A day'll come when ye'll ha' tae pay for that," she solemnly assured him.

Scissors in hand, Donald paused. "An' when will she pe hafing to do that?" he asked.

"At the last day," said she.

"An' that will pe a fery goot long credit," the robber coolly returned. "She wass going to pe only taking a coat, but now she will pe taking a waistcoat as well."

A Mountain In the Sky.

Somewhere many miles away from this earth an enormous mountain twenty miles high is flying through space. The mountain is known astronomically as the planet Eros. The ordinary man has long taken it for granted that all the planets are more or less round in shape. The small planet Eros, however, is an exception to this rule. According to the latest astronomical information, it is a mere mountain in space, "without form and void," and as it turns upon its axis first one corner and then another is presented to view. These small worlds (few are over ten or twenty miles across) are not large enough to have sufficient gravity to draw their structure into symmetry and remain as when launched into space—mammoth meteorites. A tantalizing fact for astronomers is that Eros passed very close to us about Jan. 24, 1894—before the planet was recognized—and that quite so near an approach is not due again till 1975.

"The Mine's Blown Up."

I was sitting on the edge of my bed, loosening the heel of one of my rubber boots with the toe of the other, when suddenly through the stillness of the sleeping town, from the power house half a mile away, came a low and rising note, the great siren whistle in the power house. Almost fascinated, I listened as the great note rose higher and more shrill and died away again. One blast meant a fire in the town, two blasts fire in the buildings at the mine and three blasts, the most terrible of all, a disaster or trouble in the mine. Once more, after an interminable pause, the sound came again and once more rose and died away. I did not move, but there was a sudden coldness that came over me as once more, for the third time, the deep note broke out on the quiet air. Almost instantaneously the loud jingle of my telephone brought me to my feet. I took down the receiver. "The mine's blown up," said a woman's voice.—Atlantic.

Saying No.

The author of "Pat McCarty," a book of verse with a setting of prose, shows how naturally some of the Irishmen of Antrim dilute the wine of narrative with the water of verbiage. In the excerpt below—"The Way We Tell a Story"—the diluent is used with a particularly free hand:

Says I to him, I says, says I,
Says I to him, I says,
The thing, says I, I says to him,
Is just, says I, this ways.
I hev, says I, a gre't respeck
For you and for your breed,
And onything I cud, I says,
I'd do, I wud indeed.
I don't know any man, I says,
I'd do it for, says I,
As fast, I says, as for yoursel'.
That's tellin' ye no lie.
There's naught, says I, I wudn't do
To plase your feyther's son,
But this, I says, ye see, says I,
I says, it can't be done.

The Spectacled Bear.

The spectacled bear of Ecuador is so called because of a patch of white around each eye, which makes the animal look as though he was peering through a pair of great spectacles.

In size and general color the spectacled bear looks not unlike the American black bear. But its hair is very shaggy. At each side of the head is a white bar, which gives the animal the appearance of wearing a halter. But the most distinctive feature is the white around the eyes.

Attachment.

The schoolteacher was trying to illustrate the difference between plants and animals.

"Plants," she explained, "are not susceptible of attachment to man as animals are."

"How about burs, teacher?" piped a small boy who had passed the summer in the country.—Chicago News.

For the Children

The Hen and Her Cuddle - de - wees.

Our hen has a flock of cuddle-de-wees
That follow her round all day.
Some are yellow, and one is black,
And two are a pretty gray.
And at evening time when the sunset light
Is shining between the trees
Our hen picks out a shady spot
And calls to her cuddle-de-wees.
And there in the shadow beneath the trees
They run to her gladly, the cuddle-de-wees.
—St. Nicholas.

Names of Canadian Provinces.

Of course we all know that Nova Scotia is the Latin for New Scotland. The name was given by the Earl of Stirling's Scottish colony.

New Brunswick was so named in 1784 after the family of the reigning sovereign of Great Britain, the house of Brunswick.

Prince Edward Island was named after Edward, duke of Kent.

Quebec is from Kebec, a narrowing. This is an Indian word and was given to the site of the first French settlement because the St. Lawrence river narrows there. The province took its name from the leading settlement.

Ontario is from the Indian Onontario, meaning beautiful lake. The province thus gets its name from one of its principal lakes.

Manitoba is also of Indian derivation Manitou-be means the passing of the Great Spirit.

Saskatchewan is an Indian word in the Cree dialect meaning swiftly flowing water.

Alberta was named after the sixth daughter of Queen Victoria, wife of the Duke of Argyll, Louise Caroline Alberta.

British Columbia honors Columbus, the discoverer of America, and also the empire to which it belongs.—Halifax Herald.

Lighting the Candle.

"I'll bet you that I can light this candle," said George to Bobby, "without touching the wick."

"Go ahead and prove it," said Bobby shortly.

Since the coin episode he never disputed the possibility of a thing with George.

George lighted the candle and let it burn until the snuff was quite long.

Then he quickly blew it out. A thin thread of smoke rose. To this George quickly applied a lighted match.

Bobby started in amazement, for the flame ran down the smoke and rekindled the candle.

This is a simple experiment. If you try it you will be surprised at the distance from the candle you can hold the light and yet have the experiment succeed. It is a pretty and fantastic trick.

An Egg Race.

On either side of the room six large hard boiled colored eggs are placed in a line at intervals of about a foot. At the far end of each line is a large open basket or a coarsely woven nest. Two leaders are chosen, who, in turn, choose sides. A player from each side is given a large wooden spoon and stands at the near end of his line. At a signal each starts to spoon up the eggs one at a time, carrying them to the nest. A list of the winners on each side is kept, and at the end of the game the side which has the greater number is the winner. Small individual prizes may be given to all the players on the victorious side—for example, tiny nests filled with egg bonbons.

The Bottle Conjurer.

State to the company that it was proved some years ago at a theater that to crawl into a quart bottle was an impossibility, but the rapid progress made by the march of intellect in these enlightened times has proved that any person may crawl into a pint bottle as easily as into his bed. Having thus prefaced your intentions, you get a pint bottle and place it in the middle of the room, then go outside the door and, creeping into the room upon all fours, say, "Ladies and gentlemen, this is crawling in to the pint bottle."

Arbor Day.

Grow thou and flourish well.
Ever the story tell
Of this glad day.
Long may thy branches raise
To heaven our grateful praise!
Waft them on sunlight rays
To God away.

"Let music swell the breeze
And ring from all the trees"
On this glad day.
Bless thou each student band
O'er all our happy land.
Teach them thy love's command,
Great God, we pray.

Deep in the earth today
Safely thy roots we lay,
Tree of thy love.
Grow thou and flourish long.
Ever our grateful song
Shall its glad notes prolong
To God above.

A Big Meal at a Little Price

The manager of the new restaurant said last night that they are in a position to serve a biggers and better meal for a small sum than ever served in the city before. The new restaurant will be called the Busy Bee Restaurant. The many improvements that they have added to the restaurant ought to be the busy restaurant of the town. The prices are very reasonable and the service quick. Specials every day. Tables especially for the ladies. 222t6

The Chinese Gong.

The bugle does not sound the call to meals on the Pacific liners, as is the Atlantic habit. Instead a Chinaman pats a gong gently, and its booming echoes find the ear, no matter how remotely located. The gong is the quintessence of vibration. It sets waves of sound into motion that reverberate from every barrier. It moans or defies according to the strength with which it is struck. No wonder the Chinese used it in battle to scare the foe!—New York World.

His First Voyage.

The old sailor came along with a bucket of tar.

"What are you doing?" gasped the seasick passenger feebly.

"Pitching the deck, sor," responded the salt, with a deep sea salute.

"Pitching the deck? Great Scott! Isn't it pitching enough already?"—Chicago News.

John (Scissors) McIlvaine, the Charleroi twirler who has been playing professional ball for a number of seasons, has not yet signed for an engagement. He has had several offers, but none that he has thus far cared to accept.

The work of repairing the Charleroi Foundry and Machine company's premises which were damaged by fire some time ago is going steadily on. It is expected that the plant will soon be running at its former capacity.

B. L. Parsons is making a special delivery of trees and shrubbery for spring planting. In view of the elimination of so many Carolina poplars many property owners are renewing shade trees about their premises.

The new Lock Four Brick company which took over the old brick yard at North Charleroi, has repairs and additions well along, and expects to employ when running at its normal capacity about 18 people with a monthly payroll of approximately $1,000.

Marion Factory Now Operating

The large factory of the Macbeth-Evans Glass company at Marion, Ind., which has been idle for a number of months, while changes were being made, is again in operation with an equipment of Owens automatic machines, the principal output of the factory being lantern globes. About $30,000 was spent on the remodeling of the plant.

Vicious Dogs at Large.

Complaints have been made that a number of vicious dogs are permitted to roam about the town and several persons have been bitten. James D. Wilson is one who has been attacked and now he goes armed with a stout cudgel, and the canine that makes a hostile demonstration toward him is likely to get a cracked skull.

Milk on a Stick.

In winter time milk goes to the buyer in a chunk instead of a quart, says a Glasgow paper. The people in Siberia buy their milk frozen, and for convenience it is allowed to freeze about a stick, which comes as a handle to carry it by. The milkman leaves one chunk or two chunks, as the case may be, at the houses of his customers. The children in Irkutsk, instead of crying for a drink of milk, cry for a bite of milk. The people in winter time do not say, "Be careful not to spill the milk," but "Be careful not to break the milk." Broken milk is better than spilled milk, though, because there is an opportunity to save the pieces. A quart of frozen milk on a stick is a very formidable weapon in the hand of an angry man or boy, as it is possible to knock a person down with it. Irkutsk people hang their milk on hooks instead of putting it in pans, though of course, when warm spring weather comes on they have to use the pans or pails as the milk begins to melt and drop down the hooks.

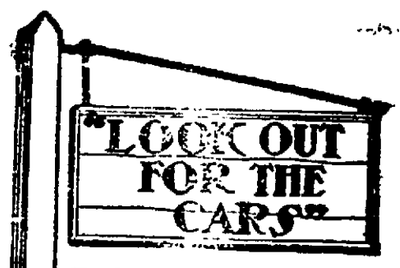
ZOOLOGY STUDY AT THE CIRCUS

What is a vlak vaark? The chances are there is not a man in America who has ever seen one. And what is an emu? How does an elephant smell? What animal's hair makes the finest Oriental lace? What animal exudes blood from its pores? What animal carries its young in a pouch? Why does a giraffe have such a long neck? What is a zebroid?

The youngest school boy who visits the menagerie of the Great Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' Shows in Charleroi on Saturday, May 6 will be able to answer these questions and many more In fact he will learn more natural history in the hour he spends among the animals than he could possibly gather from all the text books that are printed.

The management of this circus has this season introduced an entirely new method of displaying animals. It has engaged a half dozen well-informed lecturers to pilot visitors through the zoological department, explaining many strange facts concerning the hundreds of exhibits and giving practical demonstrations of odd things that govern wild animal life. This is the first time that any circus has ever given any special attention to visitors during the hour usually devoted to the menagerie. Strangers are very often afraid to ask questions in a circus menagerie for fear of discourteous replies. With this show all is different. Patrons leave the grounds, after the various exhibitions are over, vastly more satisfied and much benefitted in an educational way.

There are 780 animals in the menagerie. The majority of them are specimens that until this season were never seen in America. Without doubt 90 per cent of the circus-goers, even in our largest cities, have not so much as heard their names. This circus considers its menagerie not merely a side attraction, but a very important part of the institution.



DO YOU know of anyone who is old enough to read, who has not seen that sign at a railroad crossing?

If everyone has seen it at some time or other, then why doesn't the railroad let the sign rot away? Why does the railroad company continue to keep those signs at every crossing?

Maybe you think, Mr. Merchant, "Most everybody knows my store, I don't have to advertise."

Your store and your goods need more advertising than the railroads need do to warn people to "Look Out for the Cars."

Nothing is ever completed in the advertising world.

The Department Stores are a very good example—they are continually advertising—and they are continually doing a good business

If it pays to run a few ads 'round about Christmas time, it certainly will pay you to run advertisements about all the time.

It's just business, that's all, to

COUNCIL GIVES ATTENTION TO REPORTS OF OFFICIALS

Burgess Risbeck Makes Statement of Arrests

WILL PREPARE ORDINANCE

Committee Instructed to Get Them in Shaps--Other Important Business

Reports and bills occupied much of the council's time Monday night at the regular monthly meeting. One of the most important reports was that of Burgess George W. Risbeck. It showed that during the month of April there had been 55 arrests. Fines and costs amounting to $84.35 were assessed and $73.35 was paid the remainder being served by prisoners. President J. K. Hein was in the chair and councilmen present were: C. O. Frye, Oscar C. Linn, Dr. A. ODavis, andW. R. Gaut. Charles Schmeiler and W. H. Calvert were absent.

The ordinance committee was instructed to prepare the ordinance which are in their hands This will include several, among which will be a dog ordinance, a tree ordinance and a building ordinance.

Chairman Linn of the street committee reported that some of the streets had been visited by members of council, relative to establishing grades. The visits will be finished at a later date.

The police committee was instructed to assist in getting a record of all the electric light, electric railway and telephone poles in the town so that a correct record may be kept of them. Along the same line action was taken to the effect that Borough Engineers at the expiration of their term of office turn over to the borough all record books and data held by them of borough work done.

A monument to mark the boundary of the borough at the northern end of McKean avenue, which had been removed, is to be replaced.

The report of the treasurer, E. W. Hastings showed a deficit for the month of March. Disbursements amounted to $3,064.95, and the receipts for the month were $1,123.29. There was reported an overdraft of $1,941.56.

OPENING GAME IS STOPPED BY RAIN

Jupiter Pluvius put a crimp in the plans for the opening baseball game to have been played Monday evening by the champion Episcopals and Christians. A down pour of rain prevented the game being called and the opener was postponed until tonight when the Baptists and the Washington Avenue Presbyterians are scheduled to fight it out. It is not thought the cold weather will prevent the game from being played.

CONSTABLES MAKE RETURNS OF CLUBS AT MONONGAHELA

Booze Question is Put Up to the District Attorney and the Grand Jury by Valley Officers

In the report of the constables at the county seat at Washington Monday, which some newspapers facetiously call the "quarterly blind man's parade," it is stated that a constable from Monongahela returned three of the leading clubs of that city as being virtually speakeasies. Two of the clubs are the Elks and the Eagles and they are both strong in numbers and influence, some of the most prominent residents of the town being members. The third club, it is believed is of about the same character and class.

The reports of the constables were made a good deal of a mystery because of the desire of the district attorney to pass them up to the grand jury, which began its session. If the grand jury can be shown that organizations which pay government tax and conduct buffets are violating the law it is expected that a bundle of true bills will be returned and that a bitter and sensational legal battle will result.

Minstrel is Well Given

Benefit Affair For St. Jerome's Church is Good Success

The Colonial Minstrels played to a good crowd at Coyle Theatre Monday night in a benefit for St. Jerome's Catholic church. Given under the direction of John Jenkins, the minstrel was undoubtedly one of the best efforts of the kind attempted in Charleroi for some time.

The end men were at their best. With Miller, Nick Phillips, Heffran, and Barrett as the bones and Brady, Michiner, Rider and Ray as the tamboes there was a comical lineup that would be hard to beat. Their songs were sung in a style that would have made professional minstrel kings turn green with envy. Jack Rickey was the interlocutor, and he assisted the end men in getting off their jokes to perfection. The soloists wre Urban, Ed. Miller, Doss James and Lew Glasser.

In the olio were included good stunts by Urban, as a crack shooter, Jack Keefer, in a musical monologue and Miller, Ray , James and Brady in "Look Out for Jimmy Valentine." A cake walk concluded the performance. The performance will be repeated again tonight.

A feature was the versatility of Doss James. Ambrose, the wire walker and juggler, failed to put in an appearance and Mr. James stepped into the breach and without a moment's notice, supplied the deficiency with three excellent illustrated songs. These appealed to the audience more perhaps than the original number on the program.

After 8:30 tonight seats in the gallery will be sold at 25 cents.

Local Brigade Gets Uniform

Will Have Them Here for Decoration Day--May Form Battery

Measures were taken for 44 uniforms for the Charleroi Brigade Monday night by a representative of the firm of the M. G. Liley Co., of Pittsburg. He will finish the work of taking measurements tonight and the order be placed at once, so that the new equipment will be here by Decoration Day. An effort is being made by the brigade to form a battery. The battery would contain two 3-inch guns, and sabres and revolvers would form a part of the armament. Capt. R. Dale Jolliffe has communicated with the Secretary of War in regard to the battery and an answer is expected in a few days. The bridage will hold their annual election of officers Thursday.

KILLS SELF DURING FIT OF INSANITY

Monongahela Glassworker Fires Bullet Into Brain

FIRST SHOOTS AT WIFE

Temporarily insane it is said Thomas Cotter aged 45 of Monongahela after firing five shots at his wife Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock placed the revolver in his own mouth and fired the one remaining bullet into his brain He died almost instantly. Ill health superinducing melancholia and temporary insanity is ascribed as the cause. Mrs Cotter escaped injury.

Cotter was a well known glassworker. It is said that as Mrs Cotter was sitting in her home reading he addressed some incoherent remarks to her, which were not answered immediately, whereupon it is asserted the man deliberately pulled a gun and placing his hand on her shoulder fired. In spite of the proximity of the gun, the bullet went wild. She fled into the yard and screamed for help. He fired two more shots at her and then shot himself.

Four sons and five daughters survive. Cotter was the first man to break ground for the Wightman Window Glass company, at Monongahela which is now known as the American Window Glass company.

Millage Placed at 13 Mills--Regular Monthly Meeting

TAX COLLECTOR TO QUIT

Will Send in His Resignation to the Court at Washington This Week

Millage was placed at 13 mills for the ensuing year by the North Charleroi council Monday night, in its regular monthly meeting. This is the same as last year. Memebers of council present at the meeting Monday night, when a number of important matters were considered were: David Shafer, Herman Nebulung, Samuel Gaskill, Jasper Rockwell and John I. Cope.

Borough Treasurer S. W. Sharpneck made his report showing a balance in the treasury of $275.89. Bills to the amount of $183.95 were ordred paid. Tax Collector Carson reported unpaid taxes for 1909 amounting to $186.57 and $735.66 for 1910. He also made a statement that he would forward his resignation to the court at Washington this week, owing to the fact that he has changed hi sresidence.

The report of the borough auditors was presented and accepted and will be published in a few days. The brough clerk was instructed to keep in his office an expense an cash book and an inventory book.

A resolution presented by the Boan of Health favoring a dog quarantine was accepted. A street grievance presented by Robert L. Matthews was referred to the street committee. The street committee wasalso empowered to proceed with the work of Fifth street to Seventh street.

Action was taken to have the boardwalk committee lay all sidewalks where property owners have not complied with notices served.

GRAND JURY BEGINS GRIND FOR MAY TERM

Joe T. S. Cowen, of Roscoe, is Named Foreman—Talk by Judge Taylor

The grand jury for the May term of court was called before Judge Taylor Monday and charged with their duties. The court called attention to the jurors that in addition to their ordinary duties they would be called upon to pass upon the improvement of several roads at the expense of the county and to increase the county indebtedness. In this he urged them to use judgment and discretion. Joe T. S. Cowan, editor of the Roscoe Ledger was made foreman of the grand jury.

Several true bills were found by the grand jury and several offenders pleaded guilty and were sentenced by the court All were petty cases.

NOT ASSURING.

With Congress tinkering with the tariff, with Supreme Court decisions pending that affect the operation of large industrial concerns and railroads, with a big strike of shopmen of the Pennsylvania Railroad company that threatens to involve the whole system, and numerous other unsettled labor conditions, the business outlook for the year is certainly not assuring. Capital under these conditions is not looking for investment, established industries are not expanding or extending their field of operation and building operations are halted and everything is in a waiting condition

This is evidenced by the industrial reports of the week. First of all the United States Steel corporation which is the industrial business barometer of the country reduced its operating capacity from 75 to 65 per cent during the past week. Its earnings have been materially reduced, as well as those of other concerns, while railroad earnings have very materially fallen off. Building operations are less than usual the report from Philadelphia alone show $1,00,000 less for April than for the same month last year. The depression is now affecting the west, which was remarkably free from this disturbing influence last year, and a slow period in business generally is anticipated.

In the coal mining industry there is a slight impetus owing to the opening of the lake trade. This is only seasonal, and the public is made acquainted with previous slack conditions in mining by the resumption of mines that have long remained idle. Altogether the outlook is not assuring for a year of uninterrupted business operations.

OUR SCHOOLS.

How many school patrons have considered that the election of a new superintendent of schools takes place tonight? Perhaps there may be more than is apparent in the marts and public places; at all events let us hope so for it is a most momentous event in the social economy of the community. Superintendent J. G Pentz, the present incumbent, is a candidate for re-election, and so far as known there is little opposition to him. He has proven a most efficient educator, and has maintained the progressive standard that has ever characterized the public schools of Charleroi.

The public may not be aware of the fact that the local High School is far ahead of many famous institutions of learning which fifty years ago were regarded with veneration and awe by the people generally and for which so many young men and women made innumerable sacrifices to attend. Here we have the same advantages right at our doors, and everything free—tuition, books, writing material and supplies—nothing to give in return for the best and most modern educatinal advantages but attendance study and effort. Perhaps one of the reasons why the graduating classes of the High School are so small, is that education is too easy to attain. Blessings that flow unrestrained are not so often appreciated as those that come through more difficult channels.

At all events, the youth of the present generation in Pennsylvania have educational opportunities which a century ago were thought impossible, and it is a matter of regret that they are not more fully appreciated.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

Although George Washington, first President of the United States, died 112 years ago, there's a man living at Washington, D. C., who bears the distinction of being the only living person who has looked upon the face of the Father of His Country. This is John Lane, 86 years old,—and the occasion when he saw the features of the first President of the United States was when the tomb was opened at Mt. Vernon and the body transferred to a new location in 1837. An interesting account of the event is given in the current number of the Book of the Royal Blue issued by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and circulated in this community during the present week.

In accordance with the will of Washington, the family tomb of the Washington's was to be enlarged. This was not done until 1837, when the new tomb was built, and the body of the Father of His Country transferred to a new compartment. The transfer was made under supervision of a Congressional committee. Little Johnny Lane was a favorite with the statesmen who frequented his uncle's book store, and when the committee started to drive in a coach to Mt. Vernon to perform the momentous event Henry Clay picked Johnny up and lifted him to the driver's seat to accompany the party. The tomb of Washington was entered and an atempt was made to remove the coffin. It was found that the wood was so rotten that it fell to pieces, but inside was a leaden casket, containing the body, which had been hermetically sealed.

This was taken outside, when it is found that on the top of the casket was a piece of glass fitted directly over the face of the body, which had been embalmed in alcohol and tightly sealed in the casket. The gloss was cleaned of the accumulations of the past years, when the features of the greatest of soldiers, patriots and statesmen were clearly visible. The alcohol had done its work, and the head and great trunk of the man remained as in life. The face was turned to one side and those who looked saw the profile. At one point on the cheek the flesh had come to the surface of the liquid, and here was a blemish in the otherwise well preserved face. One of the men present lifted Johnny Lane up and he gazed upon the features with the others. What impressed the boy most was the herculean figure of the great soldier and statesmen, and he remarked:

"He must have been a monstrous big man."

The casket was enclosed again and the body deposited in its present resting place Every other person who was present at the opening of the casket has long since died, and John Lane is the only person living who actually gazed upon the features of the immortal Washington The face, he says, appeared very much as it did in the pictures of Washington, and the incident was ever after impressed indelibly upon his memory.

HONORED THE MONKEY.

Origin of the Coat of Arms of the Earl of Leinster.

Most of the wild animals have a place in heraldry and many strange and impossible creatures, such as griffins, dragons and unicorns, have been invented as emblems of daring and valor. But the donkey and the monkey have not been so used, except in one instance, where the monkey has been admitted to the ranks of titled nobility. The story of this adoption is told by Mr Curtis in his book "One Irish Summer."

On the Leinster coat of arms are three monkeys standing with plain collar and chained, motto, "Crom a-boo," "To Victory." This is the only coat of arms, I am told, that has ever borne a monkey in the design It was adopted by John Fitzthomas Fitzgerald in 1316 for romantic reasons.

While this Earl of Leinster was an infant he was in the castle of Woodstock, which is now owned by the Duke of Marlborough. The castle caught fire in the confusion the child was forgotten, and when the family and servants remembered him and started a search they found the nursery in ruins But on one of the towers was a gigantic ape, a pet of the family, carefully holding the young earl in his arms. The animal, with extraordinary intelligence, had crawled through the smoke, rescued the baby and carried it to the top of the tower.

When the earl had grown to manhood he discarded the family coat of arms and adopted the monkeys for his crest, and they have been retained to this day. Wherever you find the tomb of a Fitzgerald you will see the monkeys at the feet of the effigy or under the inscription.

SPENDTHRIFT ISABELLA.

A Sight That Checked Her Royal Extravagance For Awhile.

We are accustomed to think that the day is long past when a sovereign could oppress and offend a whole kingdom by personal extravagance. But the late Isabella of Spain belonged in spirit to the sixteenth century. An incident of her reckless career—which ended in the loss of the throne—is noted in Munsey's Magazine.

She spent money, pouring it out like water, at a time when the treasury was nearly bankrupt and when the proverb "Poor as a Spaniard" was far too true. All her best advisers urged her to practice economy. Very few of them succeeded, and these only for a short time.

A certain chamberlain of hers once hit upon a plan to make her realize how enormous were the sums that she was spending Passing through the hall of the palace, she was surprised to see a vast heap of silver pieces, resembling the contents of a great bin of wheat, but piled up in the middle of the floor The queen summoned her chamberlain.

"What is the meaning of all this money?" she demanded of him

"Oh," he replied, with a low bow, "this is merely the amount which I have brought out to pay the bill of your majesty's glovemaker."

The queen colored and then laughed, and for several months she was less extravagant in her expenditures for clothes.

E Pluribus Unum.

The country is indebted to John Adams for its national motto, with an Englishman of note sharing in the honor. It seems that while Adams was minister to England Sir John Prestwick, an eminent English antiquary, suggested to him a good motto to represent the union of the American colonies. Adams at once was taken with the idea, which he transmitted to Charles Thompson, the secretary of congress, who on June 20, 1782, reported to that body his design for a government seal. In this the Latin legend "E Pluribus Unum" was to be borne on a ribbon held in the beak of an eagle.

Just where Sir John got the idea is not certain, but it is a fact that the motto was in use on the cover of the Gentleman's Magazine, first published in 1730, and it may have struck his fancy by its applicability to the situation then obtaining in America.

New Zealand's Glaciers.

The great size of the glaciers around Mount Cook, in New Zealand, has been often remarked The Tasman is eighteen miles long, the Murchison ten miles, the Godley eight miles, the Mueller eight miles and the Hooker seven miles. Most of these glaciers have moraines of exceeding roughness, but the approaches to them are not steep, as is usually the case with European glaciers The southern Alpine snow line is only a little over 7,000 feet. Glacially polished rocks are rare, and in many ways the mountains are singularly different from those of central Europe.

"I was just telling our friend here, Molly, that it was storming on the day of our marriage."

"Surely not, Hiram! The weather was perfectly lovely!"

"Well, well! I don't know how I got so mixed up about it; probably because it's been storming ever since!" —Atlanta Constitution.

A Fish Story.

"There are as good fish in the sea as were ever taken out of it," remarked Small to Young, who had been refused by Moneybag's daughter.

"Yes, I know. But they are not goldfish."

Circumstances are the rulers of the weak. They are but the instruments of the wise.—Samuel Lover.

Schoolboy Blunders.

The University Correspondent recently offered a prize for schoolboy mistakes. Here are a few examples: "Mute, inglorious Milton"—these epitaphs are used by a writer who was envious of Milton's being poet orient. He finds "sermons in stones" expresses the same idea as Wordsworth's "the restless stone that all day long is heard." Calvin was a noted scientist and peer, who died lately. Naples is an independent state in the north of India. Shakespeare made a mistake in mentioning Galen, who did not live until a hundred years after his time. The feminine of fox is foxhen. John Burns was the name of one of the claimants to the throne of Scotland in the reign of Edward I. The pyramids are a range of mountains between France and Spain. The three highest mountains in Scotland are Ben Nevis, Ben Lomond and Ben Jonson. Wolsey saved his life by dying on the way from York to London. When the English first landed in Australia the only four footed animal in the country was a rat. Monsoons are fertile gorges between the Himalayas.

When Bjornson Died.

Bjornson's son, in describing the last hours of his father, writes: "Now and then the bright flame of his humor flickered up The doctor felt his pulse and said it was good. With his face beaming with humor he turned toward us and said, 'I am the first man to die with a good pulse.' He said one evening—and it seemed as if an old wise man was speaking with the weight of experience, 'Now I could write—yes, now I could write, for I have been in the realms of death and have felt the pain that attends death' And when all of us thought that the indifference of death was upon him—my mother, who always gave him his food, which he would receive only from her, stood at the bedside with a brooch on her breast which she had worn at her confirmation—then he opened his eyes and looked at her. He smiled, lifted his hand and touched the brooch. This was the last sign to the outer world he was able to give."

A Cold Ride.

All through his life Senator Dolliver of Iowa had a horror of fast trains and possible railroad wrecks. Once he was on a train with Vice President Fairbanks.

Dolliver awoke in the middle of the night, and it seemed to him that the train was going at terrific speed. He climbed out of his berth and, arrayed only in his pajamas, started down the length of the train to find the conductor and ask him to order the train run at less speed It was a cold night, but the senator did not mind that until the door of his car snapped shut and locked behind him and he found that the door of the next coach was also locked. He rode sixty-five miles locked out in the cold of the vestibule before he could wake up anybody to let him in. Mr. Fairbanks finally heard his cries for help and rescued him.—New York Tribune.

Necks and Legs of Animals.

With few exceptions there is a marked equality between the length of the necks and of the legs of both birds and quadrupeds, and whether they be long or short is determined chiefly by the place where the animal must go for its food. This is especially noticeable in beasts that feed constantly upon grass, in which case the neck has just a slight advantage in that it cannot hang perpendicularly down. Crocodiles, lizards and fish have practically no necks. Fowls that feed in the water also offer an example of this correspondence between the members, with the exception of swans and geese and some Indian birds, which gather their food from the bottom of pools and must have long necks for that purpose, while the short legs make it more convenient for them to swim.—Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette.

A Story Pepys Tells.

Pepys tells in his diary that in the reign of King Charles II. a customer bargaining with a London merchant for claret hired a confederate to "thunder (which he had the art of doing upon a deal board) and to rain and hail—that is, make the noise of—so as to give them a pretense of undervaluing their merchant's wines, by saying this thunder would spoil and turn them, which was so reasonable to the merchant that he did abate two pistolls per tun for the wine in belief of that."

A Mighty Difference.

Brougham used to tell an anecdote about the flight from Waterloo. Napoleon was greatly depressed. His aid riding beside him thought he might be sorrowing over the loss of so many old comrades at arms and tried to comfort him by saying that Wellington also must have lost many friends. "He has not lost the battle," was the reply.

Utterly Useless.

"Pa, what is a futile remark?"

"The one a man makes for the purpose of changing the subject when his wife complains because he has forgotten their wedding anniversary."—Chicago Record-Herald.

She Was Wise.

"I asked Miss Jimps to sing something, and she refused point blank. Is she grouchy?"

"No She's trying to make a hit with you. Cheer up."—Toledo Blade.

A Sound Reason.

Mistress—Didn't you hear me calling, Jane? Jane—Yes'm, but you told me the other day never to answer you back.—Throne and Country.

Whatever enlarges hope will exalt courage.—Johnson.

AFRAID OF MOONLIGHT.

The Reason Porto Ricans Carry Umbrellas at Night.

"The majority of Porto Ricans have instilled in them from earliest infancy a superstitious dread of the full moon's rays," said a business man who has just returned from that country.

"It is a curious sight to the American visitor to note men and women going along the streets and highways of the island with umbrellas raised over their heads in the lone watches of the night, and the more brilliantly the moon is shining the greater will be the number of people who are thus protecting themselves from her beams Out in the sequestered rural districts a gay mounted cavalier will be met at midnight, his bridle rein in one hand and an upraised umbrella in the other. It looks weird and also ridiculous, but the natives do it for a peculiar reason They are possessed of the conviction that Luna's full light striking upon mortals is almost sure to make them mentally unsound—that is to say, lunatics—and that is why they interpose a shield between them and her dazzling brightness

"To sleep where the moon could shine full upon one is, in the view of a Porto Rican, to tempt fate, and it would be a daring one who could be hired to do it for any consideration."—Baltimore American.

STRENUOUS LIVING.

A Long Day in the Life of an English Lady in 1791.

As for industrious idleness, which is held to blame for the wrecking of our nervous systems, it was not unknown to an earlier generation. Mme. le Brun assures us that in her youth pleasure loving people would leave Brussels early in the morning, travel all day to Paris to hear the opera and travel all night home. "That," she observes—as well she may—"was considered being fond of the opera."

A paragraph in one of Horace Walpole's letters gives us the record of a day and a night in the life of an English lady—sixteen hours of "strain" which would put New York to the blush "I heard the Duchess of Gordon's journal of last Monday," he writes to Miss Berry in the spring of 1791. "She first went to hear Handel's music in the abbey; she then clambered over the benches and went to Hastings's trial in the hall, after dinner to the play, then to Lady Lucan's assembly, after that to Ranelagh and returned to Mrs. Hobert's faro table; gave a ball herself in the evening of that morning, into which she must have got a good way, and set out for Scotland the next day. Hercules could not have accomplished a quarter of her labors in the same space of time."—Atlantic Monthly.

A Pretty Poor Portrait.

A Chinaman of very high rank had his portrait painted, and when it was finished the painter requested him to inquire of the passersby what they thought of it. The other agreed and asked the first comer

"Do you think this portrait like?"

"The hat is extremely like," replied the critic.

The subject of the portrait asked a similar question of a second stranger, who answered that the clothes seemed to be exactly reproduced. He was about to interrogate a third when the painter stopped him and said impatiently:

"The resemblance of the hat and clothes is of no importance. Ask the gentleman what he thinks of the face"

On being asked this question the stranger hesitated a very long time, but at last he replied:

"The beard and hair are first rate."

London as It Was.

Haydn's "Dictionary of Dates" makes the statement that the old name of the city of London was written Lynden or Llyndin, meaning "the city on the lake." An old tradition gives us to understand that London was founded by Brute, a descendant of Aeneas, and called New Troy or Troynovant until the time of Lud, who surrounded the town with walls and named it Caer-Lud, or Lud's Town This latter is probably the correct version of the story, if for no other reason because it is an easy matter to detect a similarity between the expression Lud's Town and London It is claimed by some writers that there was a city on the same spot 1,107 years B. C., and it is known that the Romans founded a city there called Londinium A. D. 61.

Real Modesty.

"An actor should be modest, and most actors are," said a prominent one at a luncheon in Pittsburg. "But I know a young actor who at the beginning of his career carried modesty almost too far.

"This young man inserted in all the dramatic papers a want advertisement that said:

"'Engagement wanted—small part, such as dead body or outside shouts preferred.'"

Preferences.

"I think I'll spend my vacation on the lynx," said the first flea "I'm fond of golf."

"The giraffe for mine," declared the second flea. "I need the highest altitude I can find."—Washington Herald.

Sensible.

Mrs. X.—The flat above us is unoccupied right now. Why don't you come and live there? Mrs. Y.—Oh, my dear, we've been such good friends, and I hate to start quarreling with you!—Exchange.

A Long Credit.

The motto of the highland host that battled for the Stuart cause, which bonny Prince Charlie headed, apparently was that heaven helps those who help themselves liberally. They levied toll on the henroost, stable and, according to the author of "The Land of Romance," even on the pockets of the Covenanters.

At Swarthholm a party of these marauders overhauled the house of a tailor, and when one of them was about to cut up a web of homespun that had taken his fancy the good wife earnestly remonstrated.

"A day'll come when ye'll ha' tae pay for that," she solemnly assured him.

Scissors in hand, Donald paused "An' when will she pe hafing to do that?" he asked.

"At the last day," said she

"An' that will pe a fery goot long credit," the robber coolly returned. "She wass going to pe only taking a coat, but now she will pe taking a waistcoat as well."

A Mountain in the Sky.

Somewhere many miles away from this earth an enormous mountain twenty miles high is flying through space. The mountain is known astronomically as the planet Eros The ordinary man has long taken it for granted that all the planets are more or less round in shape. The small planet Eros, however, is an exception to this rule. According to the latest astronomical information, it is a mere mountain in space, "without form and void," and as it turns upon its axis first one corner and then another is presented to view. These small worlds (few are over ten or twenty miles across) are not large enough to have sufficient gravity to draw their structure into symmetry and remain as when launched into space—mammoth meteorites. A tantalizing fact for astronomers is that Eros passed very close to us about Jan. 24, 1894—before the planet was recognized—and that quite so near an approach is not due again till 1975.

"The Mine's Blown Up."

I was sitting on the edge of my bed, loosening the heel of one of my rubber boots with the toe of the other, when suddenly through the stillness of the sleeping town, from the power house half a mile away, came a low and rising note, the great siren whistle in the power house. Almost fascinated, I listened as the great note rose higher and more shrill and died away again. One blast meant a fire in the town, two blasts fire in the buildings at the mine and three blasts, the most terrible of all, a disaster or trouble in the mine Once more, after an interminable pause, the sound came again and once more rose and died away. I did not move, but there was a sudden coldness that came over me as once more, for the third time, the deep note broke out on the quiet air. Almost instantaneously the loud jingle of my telephone brought me to my feet. I took down the receiver. "The mine's blown up," said a woman's voice.—Atlantic

Saying No.

The author of "Pat McCarty," a book of verse with a setting of prose, shows how naturally some of the Irishmen of Antrim dilute the wine of narrative with the water of verbiage. In the excerpt below—"The Way We Tell a Story"—the diluent is used with a particularly free hand:

Says I to him, I says, says I,
Says I to him, I says
The thing, says I, I says to him,
Is just, says I, this ways
I hev, says I, a gre't respeck
For you and for your breed,
And onything I cud, I says,
I'd do, I wud indeed
I don't know any man, I says,
I'd do it for, says I,
As fast, I says, as for yoursel'.
That's tellin' ye no lie
There's naught, says I, I wudn't do
To plase your feyther's son,
But this, I says, ye see, says I,
I says, it can't be done.

The Spectacled Bear.

The spectacled bear of Ecuador is so called because of a patch of white around each eye, which makes the animal look as though he was peering through a pair of great spectacles.

In size and general color the spectacled bear looks not unlike the American black bear. But its hair is very shaggy. At each side of the head is a white bar, which gives the animal the appearance of wearing a halter. But the most distinctive feature is the white around the eyes.

Attachment.

The schoolteacher was trying to illustrate the difference between plants and animals.

"Plants," she explained, "are not susceptible of attachment to man as animals are."

"How about burs, teacher?" piped a small boy who had passed the summer in the country.—Chicago News.

The Hen and Her Cuddle-de-wees.

Our hen has a flock of cuddle-de-wees
That follow her round all day
Some are yellow, and one is black,
And two are a pretty gray
And at evening time when the sunset light
Is shining between the trees
Our hen picks out a shady spot
And calls to her cuddle-de-wees
And there in the shadow beneath the trees
They run to her gladly, the cuddle-de-wees.
—St. Nicholas.

Names of Canadian Provinces.

Of course we all know that Nova Scotia is the Latin for New Scotland. The name was given by the Earl of Stirling's Scotish colony.

New Brunswick was so named in 1784 after the family of the reigning sovereign of Great Britain, the house of Brunswick.

Prince Edward Island was named after Edward, duke of Kent.

Quebec is from Kebec, a narrowing. This is an Indian word and was given to the site of the first French settlement because the St. Lawrence river narrows there The province took its name from the leading settlement.

Ontario is from the Indian Onontario, meaning beautiful lake. The province thus gets its name from one of its principal lakes

Manitoba is also of Indian derivation Manitou-be means the passing of the Great Spirit.

Saskatchewan is an Indian word in the Cree dialect meaning swiftly flowing water.

Alberta was named after the sixth daughter of Queen Victoria, wife of the Duke of Argyll, Louise Caroline Alberta.

British Columbia honors Columbus, the discoverer of America, and also the empire to which it belongs.—Halifax Herald.

Lighting the Candle.

"I'll bet you that I can light this candle," said George to Bobby, "without touching the wick."

"Go ahead and prove it," said Bobby shortly.

Since the coin episode he never disputed the possibility of a thing with George

George lighted the candle and let it burn until the snuff was quite long.

Then he quickly blew it out. A thin thread of smoke rose To this George quickly applied a lighted match.

Bobby started in amazement, for the flame ran down the smoke and rekindled the candle

This is a simple experiment. If you try it you will be surprised at the distance from the candle you can hold the light and yet have the experiment succeed It is a pretty and fantastic trick.

An Egg Race.

On either side of the room six large hard boiled colored eggs are placed in a line at intervals of about a foot. At the far end of each line is a large open basket or a coarsely woven nest. Two leaders are chosen, who, in turn, choose sides. A player from each side is given a large wooden spoon and stands at the near end of his line. At a signal each starts to spoon up the eggs one at a time, carrying them to the nest. A list of the winners on each side is kept, and at the end of the game the side which has the greater number is the winner Small individual prizes may be given to all the players on the victorious side—for example, tiny nests filled with egg bonbons.

The Bottle Conjurer.

State to the company that it was proved some years ago at a theater that to crawl into a quart bottle was an impossibility, but the rapid progress made by the march of intellect in these enlightened times has proved that any person may crawl into a pint bottle as easily as into his bed. Having thus prefaced your intentions, you get a pint bottle and place it in the middle of the room, then go outside the door and, creeping into the room upon all fours, say, "Ladies and gentlemen, this is crawling in to the pint bottle."

Arbor Day.

Grow thou and flourish well.
Ever the story tell
Of this glad day.
Long may thy branches raise
To heaven our grateful praise
Waft them on sunlight rays
To God away.

"Let music swell the breeze
And ring from all the trees"
On this glad day.
Bless thou each student band
O'er all our happy land.
Teach them thy love's command,
Great God, we pray.

Deep in the earth today
Safely thy roots we lay,
Tree of thy love.
Grow thou and flourish long.
Ever our grateful song
Shall its glad notes prolong
To God above.

The prices are very reasonable and the service quick. Specials every day. Tables especially for the ladies. 222t6

The Chinese Gong.

The bugle does not sound the call to meals on the Pacific liners, as is the Atlantic habit. Instead a Chinaman pats a gong gently, and its booming echoes find the ear no matter how remotely located The gong is the quintessence of vibration. It sets waves of sound into motion that reverberate from every barrier. It moans or defies according to the strength with which it is struck No wonder the Chinese used it in battle to scare the foe!—New York World

"I wouldn't take a thousand dollars for the good VINOL has done me. I was told that Cod Liver Oil was the medicine I needed for my weakened condition and poor blood. I could not take the greasy mixture, and when our druggist told me that VINOL contained not only tonic iron but all the medicinal properties of Cod Liver Oil without the grease or oil or bad taste, I made up my mind that was the medicine for me. BREAKS UP COLDS

In the Head or Chest Over Night

Breathe Hyomei and get joyful relief in five minutes.

Try this just before going to bed: Pour a teaspoonful of Hyomei into a bowl of boiling water, cover head and bowl with towel and breathe for several minutes the vapor that arises, then go and sleep peacefully and awake with a clear head free from mucus.

Piper Bros. guarantees Hyomei to cure catarrh, colds, coughs, asthma, sore throat and bronchitis or money back.

A bottle costs 50 cents; a complete outfit which includes hard rubber pocket inhaler $1.00.

John (Scissors) McIlvaine, the Charleroi twirler who has been playing professional ball for a number of seasons, has not yet signed for an engagement. He has had several offers, but none that he has thus far cared to accept.

The work of repairing the Charleroi Foundry and Machine company's premises which were damaged by fire some time ago is going steadily on. It is expected that the plant will soon be running at its former capacity.

B. L. Parsons is making a special delivery of trees and shrubbery for spring planting. In view of the elimination of so many Carolina poplars many property owners are renewing shade trees about their premises.

The new Lock Four Brick company which took over the old brick yard at North Charleroi, has repairs and additions well along, and expects to employ when running at its normal capacity about 18 people with a monthly payroll of approximately $1,000.

Marion Factory Now Operating

The large factory of the Macbeth-Evans Glass company at Marion, Ind., which has been idle for a number of months, while changes were being made, is again in operation with an equipment of Owens automatic machines, the principal output of the factory being lantern globes. About $30,000 was spent on the remodeling of the plant.

Vicious Dogs at Large.

Complaints have been made that a number of vicious dogs are permitted to roam about the town and several persons have been bitten. James D. Wilson is one who has been attacked and now he goes armed with a stout cudgel, and the canine that makes a hostile demonstration toward him is likely to get a cracked skull.

Milk on a Stick.

In winter time milk goes to the buyer in a chunk instead of a quart, says a Glasgow paper. The people in Siberia buy their milk frozen, and for convenience it is allowed to freeze about a stick, which comes as a handle to carry it by. The milkman leaves one chunk or two chunks, as the case may be, at the houses of his customers. The children in Irkutsk, instead of crying for a drink of milk, cry for a bite of milk. The people in winter time do not say, "Be careful not to spill the milk," but "Be careful not to break the milk." Broken milk is better than spilled milk, though, because there is an opportunity to save the pieces. A quart of frozen milk on a stick is a very formidable weapon in the hand of an angry man or boy, as it is possible to knock a person down with it. Irkutsk people hang their milk on hooks instead of putting it in pans, though of course, when warm spring weather comes on they have to use the pans or pails as the milk begins to melt and drop down the hooks.

Yourself.

If you want to be miserable think about yourself—about what you want, what you like, what respect people ought to pay to you and what people think of you.—Charles Kingsley.

ZOOLOGY STUDY AT THE CIRCUS

What is a vlak vaark? The chances are there is not a man in America who has ever seen one. And what is an emu? How does an elephant smell? What animal's hair makes the finest Oriental lace? What animal exudes blood from its pores? What animal carries its young in a pouch? Why does a giraffe have such a long neck? What is a zebroid?

The youngest school boy who visits the menagerie of the Great Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' Shows in Charleroi on Saturday, May 6 will be able to answer these questions and many more. In fact he will learn more natural history in the hour he spends among the animals than he could possibly gather from all the text books that are printed.

The management of this circus has this season introduced an entirely new method of displaying animals. It has engaged a half dozen well-informed lecturers to pilot visitors through the zoological department, explaining many strange facts concerning the hundreds of exhibits and giving practical demonstrations of odd things that govern wild animal life. This is the first time that any circus has ever given any special attention to visitors during the hour usually devoted to the menagerie. Strangers are very often afraid to ask questions in a circus menagerie for fear of discourteous replies. With this show all is different. Patrons leave the grounds, after the various exhibitions are over, vastly more satisfied and much benefitted in an educational way.

There are 789 animals in the menagerie. The majority of them are specimens that until this season were never seen in America. Without doubt 90 per cent of the circusgoers, even in our largest cities, have not so much as heard their names. This circus considers its menagerie not merely a side attraction, but a very important part of the institution.

JOHN A. WOOD SUPPORTED BAND

Prominent Financier Who Died Some Time Ago Interested in Valley

The will of John A. Wood, filed for probate at San Diego, Cal., makes bequests to three institutions in the vicinity of Pitteburg, his former home. John A. Wood was responsible for the organization of the noted John A. Wood band of Fayette City and Charleroi a few years ago. The band, which was one of the best in this part of the State was supported and backed by him.

Abbot to Tacoma.

Ody Abbott of Monongahela, who was with the St. Louis National League base ball team last year and early this spring, was transferred to Tacoma, Washington, last week. He left St. Louis las Wednesday for the Northwest, and expects to play with the team representing that city in the Northwestern league.

Buys News Route

Joseph Matthews has purchased a news route and book store at Dubois from Fred Wilson, formerly of Charleroi, and he and his son Luke have gone to take charge.

DO YOU know of anyone who is old enough to read, who has not seen that sign at a railroad crossing?

If everyone has seen it at some time or other, then why doesn't the railroad let the sign rot away? Why does the railroad company continue to keep those signs at every crossing?

Maybe you think, Mr. Merchant, "Most everybody knows my store, I don't have to advertise."

Your store and your goods need more advertising than the railroads need do to warn people to "Look Out for the Cars."

Nothing is ever completed in the advertising world.

The Department Stores are a very good example—they are continually advertising—and they are continually doing a good business

If it pays to run a few ads 'round about Christmas time, it certainly will pay you to run advertisements about all the time.

It's just business, that's all, to
